Faith is recognizing the signs of our times and staying true to divine guidance amidst confusion.

Thoughts behind the song

Something's Off (I Can Feel It)

Has something changed since the 2020 global pandemic?

Every generation senses trouble at times, but ours feels different — heavier, stranger, more unexplainable. The headlines don't add up. Nature behaves unnaturally. Governments swell with rage and corruption. The world celebrates darkness and mocks truth. People feel it deep inside, even if they never say it out loud: Something is off. Something is wrong. Something is moving.

This song gives voice to that inner alarm. It highlights what Scripture said would happen just before the close of probation and the rise of the final deception. The world is not simply “changing” — it is aligning to the prophetic outline Christ gave. The increase of violence, the collapse of morality, the rise of spiritualism disguised as UFOs, the swelling of global fear, and the consolidation of power into beast-like systems are not random events. They are the last movements — rapid movements — of earth's final conflict.

But the song does more than diagnose the times. It calls the listener to stand — not with the world, not with the beast, not with the crowds chasing signs and lying wonders, but with Christ alone. It warns that truth will come with a cost, but the cost is nothing compared to losing the Lamb.

This is a wake-up call wrapped in rhythm — a reminder that the storm is already here, the veil between the seen and unseen is thinning, and the only safe place is under the banner of Christ.

Core Scriptures

Matthew 24:23–27 — “Believe it not... behold, I have told you before.”

2 Thessalonians 2:8–12 — Satan’s lying wonders and strong delusion.

Revelation 13:11–18 — The rise of the beast power, deception, miracles, enforced worship.

Revelation 12:17 — The remnant war: commandments + faith of Jesus.

Luke 21:25–26 — Signs in the heavens; fear gripping all nations.

Isaiah 8:19–20 — Reject spiritualism; cling to the law and testimony.

Revelation 16:13–14 — Demonic spirits gathering the world for the final war.

Revelation 3:10–11 — Hold fast; the hour of temptation is coming.

1 Peter 4:12–13 — Fiery trials and steadfast faith in Christ.

Song Style & Runtime

A quirky, nostalgic, slightly playful track that masks a deadly serious message.

Mixed-gender vocals weave in and out with ear-catching ad-libs, giving the song a retro charm while carrying a prophetic warning.

In a Tone: ironic, urgent, knowing — a smile that hides a storm on the horizon.

Runtime: 3:56

Lyrics

[Intro]

The headlines scream, the skies go dark,
The storms don't follow nature's mark.
The world's on edge, the truth feels thin—
And something's off, we feel it within.

[Verse 1]

The leaders rage, the markets fall,
The rich grow fat, the poor become small.
The murders rise, the streets grow cold—
And prophecy begins to unfold.

[Pre-Chorus]

The warnings came, the Bible is read—
But most still sleep while saints have bled.

[Chorus 1]

Something's off, I can feel it now,
The beast is near, the world's bowed down.
But I won't flinch, I won't pretend—
I'll stand with Christ until the end.

[Verse 2]

The signs are strange, the lights appear,
They speak of peace, but feed our fear.
The UFOs, the phantom skies—
Are just the start of Satan's lies.

Something's Off (I Can Feel It)

[Pre-Chorus]

The final test is drawing near—
Prepare your soul, don't wait in fear.

[Chorus 2]

Something's off, I can feel it now,
The beast is near, the world's bowed down.
But I won't flinch, I won't pretend—
I'll stand with Christ until the end.

[Verse 3]

The cost of truth is rising fast,
The faithful few may breathe their last.
So, I'll walk through fire if that's what frees.
But I won't trade the Lamb just for ease—

[Pre-Chorus]

The time is short, the call is loud—
Don't follow signs, don't trust the crowd.

[Chorus 3]

Something's off, I can feel it now,
The beast is near, the world's bowed down.
But I won't flinch, I won't pretend—
I'll stand with Christ until the end.

[Outro]

The storm is here, the veil is thin,
The final war is set to begin.
So trim your lamp, prepare your soul—
The King is near, make heaven your goal.

Reflection

This song confronts the listener with the undeniable truth: the world is lining up exactly as Scripture said it would.

From false signs in the skies, to global fear, to economic collapse, to spiritual counterfeits, the signs of the last days aren't "coming" — they're here.

The chorus declares the central warning: the beast power is rising, and the world is preparing to bow. Most will follow the signs, the miracles, the supernatural displays that appeal to sight rather than faith. But God's people are called to something different — to stand, even when standing becomes costly.

This song challenges every believer to reject the crowd, reject the deception, reject the false revival, and cling to Christ alone. The final war between truth and error is beginning to break open. Neutrality will not survive the storm.

Final Encouragement

If your spirit senses that something is wrong with this world, you're not imagining it.

The Holy Spirit is awakening hearts, urging them to prepare before the last deception sweeps across the earth.

Do not follow the signs.

Do not let fear make your decisions.

Do not trust the voices promising peace while leading souls to destruction.

Something's Off (I Can Feel It)

Stand with Christ.

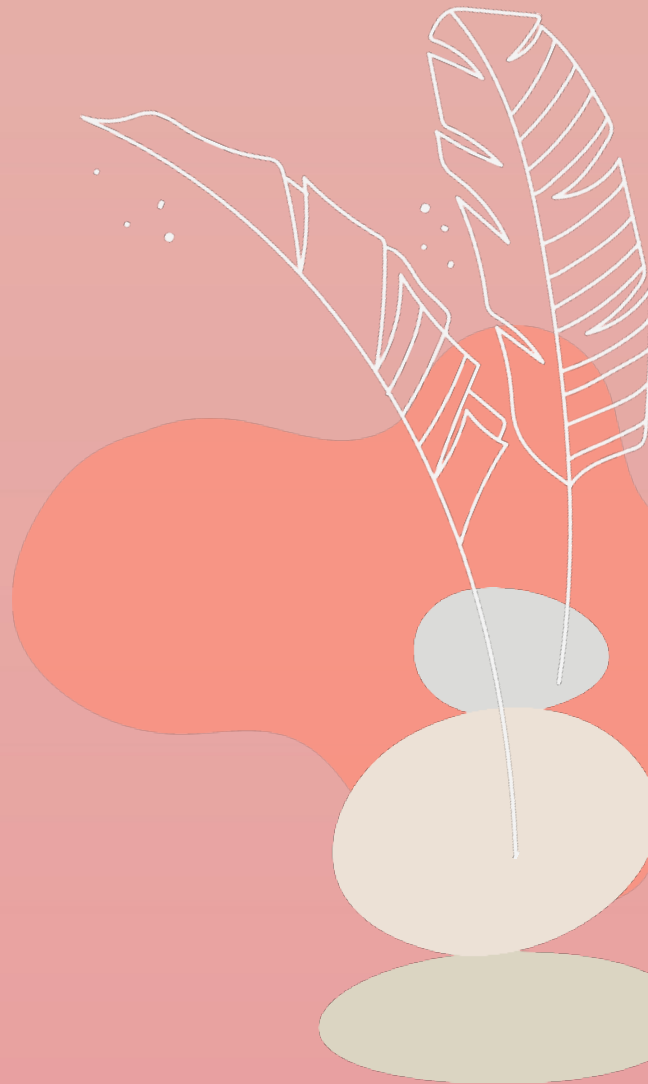

Hold fast to the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus.

Strengthen your heart in Scripture now — before the crisis reaches its peak.

The hour is late, but hope is not lost.

The King is near.

Trim your lamp, steady your faith, and lift your eyes — your redemption is drawing close.
